To issue in the name of relator a poll tax receipt and deliver it to another upon the order of relator, is the Issue raised by the sheriff and which he denies Is ministerial in character. The District Judge passed upon it and having made the mandamus peremptory he must be considered as having held it not only the ministerial duty of the sheriff to issue to relator a poll tax receipt, but it was likewise his ministerial duty to deliver such receipt to a third person upon the order of relator. The suit is one not only to compel the sheriff to do a certain thing alleged to be his ministerial duty to do, but to do it in a certain way. The court o qua adjudged he must not only do this thing, but do it in a certain way. Is not the sheriff entitled to a standing in this Court on appeal to test the correctness of this judgment? Surely he is. Again, a question of construction is raised by the sheriff--construction of the Constitution and laws defining his duties in respect to poll taxes and the issuance of receipts therefor. His conception of his duties in such matters is at variance with that of the relator and that of the trial judge. Is he not entitled to have the highest court of the State to sit In judgment, on appeal,...
