It becomes an awesome publication that I actually have actually read. It really is writter in simple terms and not difficult to understand. Once you begin to read the book, it is extremely difficult to leave it before concluding.

Excerpt: . . . units from the shapes of the vegetables which she planted and has thus added to her drawing the element of design. Fig. 87. Drawings Of Leaves, Showing Progress From Grade I To Grade III In Grades IV, V, VI, and VII the drawing of plants becomes much more detailed. One or two plants are selected for each grade. The problem of proportions and characteristics is emphasized, and attention is given to careful representation of details of growth and the foreshortening of the leaves. Fig. 90 shows Fig. 92. Drawings In Connection With Natural Science the steps which were followed in Grade V in order to obtain a careful drawing of the geranium plant, and Fig. 91 shows the final results. Fig. 92 shows drawings of corn stalks, made in connection with science work. This particular plant was chosen because a special study is made of it in the natural sciences. In these grades much emphasis is placed upon interpreting into decorative patterns the forms which have been drawn in detail and which Fig. 94. Decorative Treatment Of Forms Shown In Fig. 93 have thus become familiar. These patterns are sometimes worked out on squared paper and sometimes made by repeating the form with free brush strokes until it acquires a decorative character. Decorative drawings are also made. These are worked out in different mediums--crayon, charcoal, pencil, water color, ink, etc. In all the grades each child mounts his work either on another sheet of...
