EPA also asked that GAO acknowledge the agencys efforts that could help improve water quality data, such as the modernization of its primary computer system that stores and retrieves water quality data. GAO recognizes that EPA has many efforts aimed at improving water quality data overall, but notes that some of these efforts are limited in their ability to address the types of problems with water quality data identified. EPA also recommended that GAO add language to the report on the implications of inadequate data for identifying waters that do not meet standards. GAO agrees with this suggestion and has added a discussion of this issue to chapter 3. Second, EPAmade several points about the content and presentation of the information in the National Water Quality Inventory. The agency states that GAOs report should more strongly note that the Inventory is, by law, a summary...
