The absolute temperature of the air, the barometric height, the size and spacing of the conductors determines the p.d. that will start a corona. Let h = barometric height in inches. T = absolute temperature in degrees Fahrenheit (T= t-459-2) where t is the thermometer reading in degrees Farenheit. r = effective radius of conductor (see Table 31), i.e., the radius of the conductor + the depth of the weakest zone of atmosphere surrounding the conductor. r = radius of conductor in inches. I = distance apart of conductors in inches. Then Em.dX= 2-055r log10 Q x Bd x 1013 volts. T A simplification takes place if one takes air temperature 60 F. and barometer 30-00, again using Bd x 1010 as this occurs in the tabulated values.Emax= 2,125-5 r log10 (j)xBdx 1010 volts approximately. The above formulae are intended for similar parallel conductors between which the potential difference found from the expression is the maximum that can be applied without serious corona loss. For conductors such as a single aerial wire, with the earth s surface as the other conductor, the above can be used as a rough guide only. tfBA. #max = R Volts. where K = farads per cm. length of wire r = radius of wire in cms. This may be of use in certain cases where the capacity of an aerial wire is known, and the value of Z?max for the wire is required. Example 17a.--A horn lightning arrester is...
